Restrictions

1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:
 - I. Claims 1-14, drawn to a method for imaging molecules, classified in class 435, subclass 4.
 - II. Claim 15, drawn to a computer program, classified in class 11, and subclass 100.
 - III. Claim 16, drawn to an imaging device, classified in class 382, subclass 128.
2. The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:
 - a. Inventions I and II are related as process of using a product and the product. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP § 806.05(h)). In the instant case the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product and the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product. The method of Invention I can be practiced manually by imaging molecules with the a microscope or the naked eye to visualize x-ray film or enzymatic reaction product. Additionally, the computer of Invention II can be used as a word processor.
 - b. Inventions I and III are related as process of using a product and the product. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP § 806.05(h)). In the instant case the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product and the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product. The method of Invention I can be practiced manually by imaging molecules with the a microscope or the naked eye to visualize x-ray film or enzymatic reaction product. Additionally, the imaging device of Invention III can be used to image various materials and/or samples e.g. tissue samples, bacterial cultures, parasites and/or inorganic materials.

c. Inventions II and III are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP § 806.05(h)). In the instant case the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product and the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product. The computer of Invention II can be used as a word processor and the imaging device of Invention III can be used manually.

3. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

4. Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).

5. Applicant is reminded that upon the cancellation of claims to a non-elected invention, the inventorship must be amended in compliance with 37 CFR 1.48(b) if one or more of the currently named inventors is no longer an inventor of at least one claim remaining in the application. Any amendment of inventorship must be accompanied by a request under 37 CFR 1.48(b) and by the fee required under 37 CFR 1.17(i).
